Search strategy

Search strategy

In order to retrieve the most relevant results, you will need to construct a search string. A search string is a combination of keywords, truncation symbols, and boolean operators you enter into the search box of an electronic library resource or an Internet search engine.

Search strategy guides

-  Search strategy worksheet

our basic types of search strategies

-  1. Quick & easy
-  2. Building blocks
-  3. Pearl growing (snow-balling)

Consult the search strategy worksheet to learn more.

These strategies and parts of the guides are posted with permission of Elsevier.

SUNSearch

SUNSearch, a Stellenbosch-specific search engine for peer-reviewed papers, theses, books, abstracts and scholarly literature from all areas of research, indexed in most cases not by full text.

Search strategy builder

Use the "Search strategy builder" to help you create a search string, using Boolean logic. You can cut and paste the results into most databases' search boxes. If you cannot find items on your topic, contact your supervisor or faculty librarian.

Boolean Operators

Boolean searching is the traditional way to search for information in most online databases and on the Internet. Boolean operators, or connector words, such as AND, OR, and NOT, are used to create phrases and concepts based on specific rules of search logic. Use the Boolean machine to help with your search string.

Truncation/Wildcard Symbols

Truncation or wildcard symbols can broaden your search and allow you to look for variations of words. For example, searching on sport* would bring up variations such as sport, sports, sporting, sporty, etc.

Note: The truncation symbol varies depending on the electronic resource you are searching. For more information, consult the Help page of the database or Remedies for when you find too little or too much information in the box below.

7.  The Recent Election and the Zuma Presidency.
By: De Klerk, F. W.. Round Table, Feb2010, Vol. 99 Issue 406, p27-33, 7p; Abstract This article takes stock of the achievements and the shortcomings of post-apartheid South Africa, notably under the stewardship of Presidents Nelson Mandela and Thabo Mbeki. It analyses the implications of the General Elections held in April 2009 and offers some insights into the likely direction that a government headed by President Jacob Zuma will take over the coming months. The author argues, among other things, that the next five years will be crucial to the consolidation and promotion of constitutional democracy in South Africa, which in turn will determine the political future of the rest of sub-Saharan Africa. [ABSTRACT FROM AUTHOR]; DOI: 10.1080/00358530903513665; (AN 49142628)
Subjects: POST-apartheid era; DEMOCRACY; SOUTH Africa; SOUTH Africa -- Politics & government -- 1994-; ZUMA, Jacob, 1942-; MANDELA, Nelson, 1918-; MBEKI, Thabo, 1942-

8.  JACOB ZUMA, THE SOCIAL BODY AND THE UNRULY POWER OF SONG.
By: GUNNER, LIZ. African Affairs, Jan2009, Vol. 108 Issue 430, p27-48, 22p; Abstract This article tracks the life of the song 'Umshini Wami' (My Machine Gun) adopted by Jacob Zuma, the President of the African National Congress, since early 2005. It explores the wider implications of political song in the public sphere in South Africa and aims to show how 'Umshini Wami' helped Jacob Zuma to prominence and demonstrated a longing in the body politic for a political language other than that of a distancing and alienating technocracy. The article also explores the early pre-Zuma provenance of the song, its links to the pre-1994 struggle period and its entanglement in a seamless masculinity with little place for gendered identities in the new state to come. It argues too that the song can be seen as unstable and unruly, a signifier with a power of its own and not entirely beholden to its new owner. [ABSTRACT FROM AUTHOR]; (AN 36535650)
Subjects: POLITICAL ballads & songs; PUBLIC sphere; TECHNOCRACY; SOUTH Africa; AFRICAN National Congress; SOUTH Africa -- Politics & government - 1994-; ZUMA, Jacob, 1942-

ZIMBABWEAN FARMERS IN NIGERIA: EXCEPTIONAL FARMERS OR SPECTACULAR SUPPORT?

ABDUL RAUFU MUSTAPHA*

ABSTRACT

Since 2004, white commercial farmers displaced under Zimbabwe's fast-track land reform programme have established new successful farms near the central Nigerian town of Shonga. This article explores the basis of that success. It addresses three key questions: (1) What has actually happened near Shonga since 2004? (2) What or who is driving the process of agrarian transformation? And (3) What are the long-term consequences for the peasantry since Nigerian agriculture is still largely peasant-based? It argues that contrary to popular myths of 'enterprising' white Zimbabwean farmers, the process is driven by a complex group of actors, including the national and regional states. Comparative evidence from similar transplantations of Zimbabwean farmers suggests that active state support is central to the success of Shonga. With respect to the relationship between the commercial farms and the peasantry, it is argued that all the synergies included in the project design to promote a symbiotic development have failed to materialize. As a result, the peasantry faces a process of 'development by dispossession'.
